

PROGRESSED REPORT

The Unfolding of Your Fate

An exploration of inner evolution through secondary progressions

August 29, 2026 to August 29, 2027

Prepared for Sample Client

Geocentric Tropical Zodiac | Placidus Houses | Mean Node

Professional interpretation of the Cosmic Language of Astrology

About This Report

This is the mystical part of Astrology, although non-believers may say that all of Astrology is mystical. The principles we will employ in creating this report use sacred geometry to map the part of our soul's evolution that is connected to fate. What we do with it, however, is based on our will. We are co-creators of our existence. To believe that a portion of life is predetermined is to believe that there is a higher intelligence guiding the universe. Who, or what, that higher intelligence is, I leave for you to decide.

The following technique describes how a person progresses through life. Progressions reveal the different phases we move through, as well as our inner urges and the ways they influence us, rather than focusing primarily on outer events which are better explored in my Transits report.

(c) 2023-2032 Prema Moksha Astrology

About the Author

Samantha Campostrini Medeiros is the founder of Prema Moksha Astrology and has been studying astrology for more than twenty-five years. Her formal studies began in 1998 at the Institute Ganesha of Healing Practices in Rio de Janeiro, where she studied Astro-Psychology based on the work of Liz Greene and the psychological astrology tradition known as Modern Astrology. She has continued to deepen her knowledge through the study and practice of natal astrology, transits, progressions, traditional techniques, and predictive astrology. Her approach has also been shaped by more than twenty years of study in therapeutic disciplines, including Traditional Chinese Medicine, yoga philosophy, and Ayurveda, which have influenced the way she approaches astrology and the deeper connections between the inner world, life experiences, and the larger cycles of existence. Today, her work brings together psychological astrology, traditional and predictive techniques, and a lifelong exploration of consciousness, healing, and the mysteries of the human experience.

Your Progressed Report

SAMPLE CLIENT

Client: Sample Client

Birth data: Withheld for privacy

Chart method: Geocentric Tropical Zodiac | Placidus Houses | Mean Node

Report period: August 29, 2026 to August 29, 2027

Report location: Withheld for privacy

The following material is intended as a life review, inviting you to take a journey back through your memories and connect the periods described here with what was happening in your life at the time. For example, at age 22, during the Aries Ascendant period, the person in this chart moved to the United States, leaving behind family and roots. At that time, the progressed Ascendant was Square to Saturn in Cancer in the 4th House, reflecting a significant period of change involving home, family, and foundations.

As you read through the following pages, try to connect the periods described with the experiences, choices, challenges, and changes that were unfolding in your life. This allows you to see not only what happened, but how you were evolving through each chapter. I can help you explore these connections through a consultation, but you know your own life better than anyone. This part of the self-study is yours to discover.

The Evolution of Your Ascendant

In a progressed chart, the Ascendant reflects how your sense of self and your way of moving through the world evolve over the course of your life. As it moves through different signs, you enter new chapters of development, each bringing different qualities, priorities, and ways of experiencing yourself and your life. These chapters build upon one another, gradually revealing how you grow, what you are learning, and where your life is inviting you to evolve next.

You began this chapter of your soul's evolution with the Ascendant in Pisces, but at the last degrees of it, therefore your Ascendant changed to Aries pretty fast afterwards. This placed the beginning of your journey at the threshold between the mysterious inner world and the emergence of your individual identity. Pisces is a deeply spiritual sign that believes in goodness and flows with the rhythm of the ocean without trying to control it. You remained in this sign for four years, giving the beginning of your life an ocean of feelings, impressions, sensitivity, imagination, and innocence.

Neptune, the modern ruler of Pisces, connects this early development of your identity with your 9th House in Sagittarius, a place associated with your personal growth, spiritual growth, intellectual enrichment, the laws that bind you, and the unknown places you need to explore for your evolution. Neptune is conjunct your North Node, suggesting that this search for something greater than yourself is deeply connected to your fate. Your Moon in the 1st House is opposite Pluto in the 7th House, creating tension between your emotional needs and personal independence on one side and the transformative power of relationships on the other. Neptune, however, forms harmonious aspects to both planets, trining the Moon and sextiling Pluto, offering a pathway through which this opposition can find greater balance and integration through Neptune, that in Aries represent the generosity of spirit, and the faith that everything will turn out well. Neptune's square to Jupiter in your 12th House, in a mutual reception, adds another layer of confirmation that spirituality, faith, the unseen world, and the search for meaning are strong parts of your path. Even at the beginning of your life, there was a strong sensitivity to experiences that could not always be explained through the rational mind. This chart indicates a person who came into this world to fulfill a spiritual quest related to relationships, personal independence, and growth.

The first four years also brought your developing Ascendant into contact with several important parts of your natal chart. The early quincunxes to Mercury and Uranus, followed by the quincunx to Mars at age four, suggest that your emerging sense of self was already learning to adjust to powerful mental, unconventional, and assertive forces within you. The contact with Mars coincided with your transition from Pisces into Aries, marking the beginning of a very different chapter. For what you told me you were living in a very abusive household where your stepfather had alcohol issues and became violent, and these Martian years and aspects will indicate that with the connections with Pluto, Neptune and Moon.

At four years old, your progressed Ascendant moved into Aries, where it remained until 2008, when you were 33. This was a very different way of meeting life from Pisces. The chart ruler shifted from Neptune to Mars, a boisterous, vibrant, fiery energy that guided you through your younger years and told you that you needed to be stronger, mightier and capable to protect yourself because the world wasn't a safe place.

During this phase, you were learning to experience life more directly and energetically, to act, explore, assert yourself, and follow your impulses. You may have developed a strong need for movement and activity, enjoying the outdoors, physical movement, and strenuous activities. Others may have experienced you as joyful, lively, passionate, loud, impulsive, or even somewhat aggressive and reactive. This was a chapter of learning to engage with life through action, vitality, courage, and a growing sense of independence.

Your Mars, however, carries a much deeper intensity than Aries alone would suggest. It is in Scorpio in your 8th House, where it is conjunct your Sun and Venus and forms part of a powerful concentration of planets. Mars also carries themes of your 2nd and 9th Houses, connecting questions of self-worth, resources, beliefs, and meaning with the intense emotional experiences of the 8th House. Mars is one of the strongest planets in your chart, giving this period considerable force, courage, resilience, and determination. At the same time, because Mars is the most challenging planet in your day chart, its strength could also express itself through impulsiveness, conflict, intensity, or experiences that required you to learn how to handle your own power. Your Aries years were therefore not simply about becoming independent. They were about discovering the strength of your own nature and learning how to direct it wisely rather than in a constant need for self-defense.

The progressed Ascendant became especially active during these years. At 11, it conjuncted your natal Moon in the 1st House while opposing Pluto in the 7th, bringing your developing identity into direct contact with intense emotional and relational forces. At 12, it formed an exact trine to Neptune, and as you explained you started to drink and smoke weed with your group of friends whose parents were always at work and you ran freely in a small town with not many rules. At 22, it formed a square to Saturn in your 4th House, bringing a more challenging period of development around responsibility, family, emotional security, and the foundations of your life and as you told me your moving from your family and roots to a foreign country for the very long term.

The final years of the Aries period were particularly significant. Between the ages 31 and 37, your progressed Ascendant successively opposed Mercury, Uranus, Mars, Venus, and the Sun, activating the powerful concentration of planets in your 8th House. This created a prolonged encounter between your developing sense of self and some of the deepest forces within your nature. Questions of identity were increasingly intertwined with intimacy, relationships, vulnerability, desire, power, and transformation. At 33, the Ascendant opposed Mars itself while simultaneously leaving Aries and entering Taurus, creating a powerful threshold between two very different chapters of your development and that was the year you got divorced and had to learn self-empowerment and providing to oneself, while now fully disconnected from roots of the culture you were born in.

At 33 years old, your Ascendant progressed to Taurus, where it will remain until 2042. After the fiery and independent years of Aries, Taurus brings you into a very different chapter of your evolution, ruled by Venus. Venus connects this period with communication, relationships, intimacy, shared resources, and the things you value most deeply. This is a phase of learning what and who you truly value and of creating a life that reflects those values.

You may find yourself placing greater importance on meaningful relationships, cooperation, stability in your work, financial security, and creating something that can grow and endure over time. Venus also brings a greater awareness of what brings you pleasure and fulfillment, asking you to consider whether the people you choose, the work you do, and the life you are creating are genuinely aligned with what your heart values. After the urgency and self-assertion of Aries, this chapter invites you to cultivate, nurture, and build with patience.

Your natal Venus, however, is in Scorpio in the 8th House, where it is in detriment, closely combust the Sun, and under pressure from the malefics. This makes the Venusian themes of this period more complex and deeply transformative. Relationships and intimacy may not simply be places where you seek comfort and security. They can become places where you learn about trust, vulnerability, attachment, desire, and the difference between what you genuinely value and what you feel you must receive from others in order to feel valued yourself.

Yet Venus also has important resources. It is in mutual reception with Pluto in your 7th House and is applying to a trine with Jupiter in your 12th House. These connections offer possibilities for transformation, wisdom, healing, and deeper understanding through relationships and through the experiences that shape your values. This period is therefore not simply about finding stability. It is about discovering what is truly worth building and allowing your relationships, work, and values to become more aligned with your soul quest.

The beginning of the Taurus period continues the intensity of the previous chapter, as the progressed Ascendant moves through its opposition to the planets of your 8th House concentration. As you described in that period, your trust and allies have been tested many times, and you have become jaded with your relationships and slower into moving into them. After these early degrees, however, the Taurus Ascendant makes relatively few major contacts with your natal planets. The relative quietness that follows can be seen as an opportunity to integrate rather than continually confront. The emphasis gradually shifts toward cultivating what you have learned and giving it a more stable and lasting form. In 2028, your progressed Ascendant forms a supportive sextile to Saturn in your 4th House, offering an opportunity to create greater structure, stability, and maturity in the life you are building.

At 68 years old, your Ascendant will progress to Gemini. After the grounding and consolidation of Taurus, Gemini opens a new chapter centered on the mind, communication, curiosity, learning, movement, and the exchange of information. This can be a period of continued learning, writing, teaching, sharing knowledge, asking questions, and remaining mentally engaged with the world around you. Because Mercury becomes the ruler of your Ascendant, the development and expression of your mental faculties become particularly important during this chapter of life. You may find yourself more interested in understanding, communicating, connecting ideas, and revisiting experiences from a different perspective.

The Ascendant will move through much of your 3rd House before reaching the 4th House cusp, gradually shifting the focus from learning, communication, and exchange toward home, family, belonging, and your inner foundations. Because Mercury also rules your 4th and 7th Houses, relationships and family become important parts of this later chapter. Your natal Mercury is closely connected to Uranus, suggesting that this period can bring significant changes in the way you think, communicate, understand yourself, and relate to others. These changes may be liberating and intellectually stimulating, but they can also involve periods when the way you process information or experience the world feels disrupted or unfamiliar. The progression does not determine which expression will occur, but it makes the development and condition of the mind an important theme to observe.

Around age 68, as the Ascendant enters Gemini, it forms a quincunx to Mars, a symbol of strife, assertion and the need to add more force. Around age 70, it reaches Venus, and relationships may cause some unexpected conflicts and adjustments, followed by the Sun around age 73 creating conflicts and adjustments of identity and soul quest. These contacts continue the deep process of integrating the themes of relationships, identity, desire, and transformation that have been present throughout your life.

After this initial period, the Ascendant moves through a quieter stretch before becoming more active again. Around age 76, it forms supportive aspects to your Moon and Pluto, potentially bringing greater emotional understanding and deeper connection within your relationships. Around age 77, it opposes Neptune, which may bring a period of questioning or redefining your beliefs, perceptions, spirituality, or understanding of what gives life meaning.

Around age 81, the Ascendant reaches your South Node in the 3rd House while also forming a challenging aspect to Jupiter. This can become an important period of reflection on everything you have learned and experienced throughout your life. Old ways of thinking, familiar stories, and beliefs may come back into awareness, asking you to decide what still belongs to your present and what can finally be released.

Much later, around age 99, the Ascendant forms a trine to your natal Mercury, followed around age 101 by a trine to Uranus. These final contacts bring the Gemini chapter into a remarkable closing sequence, returning to the themes of the mind, communication, understanding, and the unique way you have learned to perceive the world. The later years of this cycle therefore invite not only continued curiosity, but also the integration and sharing of a lifetime of knowledge and experience.

The Progressed Moon and your Natural Rhythm

While the Progressed Ascendant describes the structural evolution of your identity and outer container, the Progressed Moon maps the deep, instinctual landscape of your inner world. It reveals your shifting emotional focus, your changing psychological needs, and the interior rhythm of your soul's growth. Moving at a rate of approximately one degree per month, the Progressed Moon completes a full journey through your chart every 29.5 years, creating distinct 3.5 to 4-year chapters that guide your emotional development.

To understand where you are today, we must look at the lunar phases. The changing relationship between your Progressed Moon and Progressed Sun acts as a master clock, dictating whether you are in a season of planting seeds in the dark, fighting for growth in the light, or composting the past into wisdom.

Your life up to now have progressed through the major cycles:

The First Cycle (Birth to 1991): Born into a Waxing Gibbous phase, your early years were marked by an immediate emotional high tide as a Progressed Full Moon arrived at just 2 years old. This early illumination cast a stark light on a turbulent childhood environment. As the Moon touched your South Node and then conjuncts your natal Saturn in Cancer in the 4th House at ages 7 and 8, your emotional world was deeply conditioned by survival, hyper-vigilance, and the heavy, restrictive atmosphere within the household.

The Second Cycle (1991 to 2020): On February 7, 1991, at age 16, the Progressed New Moon at 21° Scorpio initiated a seed-planting moment that occurred in a supportive trine to your natal Saturn in the 4th House. This trine provided the structural grit, resilience, and psychological determination needed to build one's psychological foundation. This cycle brought the major turning points of your adulthood, peaking with a Progressed Full Moon at age 32 (Gemini/Sagittarius axis) that illuminated the balance between your personal perspective and higher philosophical beliefs.

You are in the Waxing Crescent Phase

In September 2020, at age 46, you initiated your third major life cycle with a Progressed New Moon at 21° Sagittarius, sitting deeply in your natal 9th House. This initiated a deep internal search for truth, meaning, direction, and spiritual integration. Four years later in 2024 at 10° Aquarius, your Progressed Moon transitioned into the Waxing Crescent Phase, which is the exact emotional climate you are navigating throughout this report period (August 2026 to August 2027). In the tradition of modern evolutionary astrology, the Waxing Crescent represents the season of Imbolc or Candlemas, the time when the tiny sliver of light returns to the dark sky. The seed planted in 2020 has taken root, and you are now tasked with feeding its growth. The Waxing Crescent demands pure grit and a willingness to break away from old emotional habits, forcing you to actively overcome the gravity of old, defensive psychological patterns. Moving through your progressed 11th House and natal 12th House in Aquarius, this phase carries a highly individualistic, liberated energy. Aquarius refuses to compromise its truth for the comfort of others, helping you develop a more objective, detached, and spiritually sovereign relationship with your emotional past. You are feeling an intense internal drive to establish your independent path. The focus here is not yet on public applause, which belongs to the Full Moon phase, but on the raw, courageous act of building your craft and claiming your unique perspective on consciousness and healing.

As your Progressed Moon traverses the late degrees of Aquarius during this specific report year, it acts as a cosmic trigger, activating the most sensitive, therapeutic, and evolutionary centers of your natal chart, the 12th and 8th Houses. This year is a highly active, sensitive time where your past traumas, your spiritual gifts, and your professional mastery are being distilled into pure wisdom.

Relational Healing and Integration (August 2026 to November 2026). The opening of this report period meets a phase of internal alignment. As the Progressed Moon forms a harmonious trine to your natal Uranus and your radix Venus across the 12th and 8th houses, there is a release of the final remnants of old relationship trauma that most likely occurred in your Aries Ascendant years. The survival needs of those years are giving way to a strong sense of value and self-reliability. Concurrently, the Progressed Moon forms a trine to your radix Sun, peaking on October 28, 2026. This marks a vital moment of personal integration where your physical vitality and your core identity are clicked into alignment, giving you the stamina needed for the deeper mental emotional work ahead.

Reclaiming the Warrior's Anchor (September 2026 to March 2027). In September 2026, the Progressed Moon enters a square to your progressed Mars, creating some issues with the 12th house to the 9th house of philosophy and truth. This aspect peaks exactly on December 10, 2026, and challenges you to confront any lingering, unconscious fears that have blocked your professional ambitions. Because Mars rules your past Aries chapter and carries the memory of early self-defense, this square might manifest as temporary impatience or an intense psychological pressure to over-exert yourself.

The universe is testing your ability to move out of survival mode. Instead of using your martial energy to fight external battles or anticipate attacks, you are being asked to channel this incredible drive into building your own path. This tension is answered on October 31, 2026, when the Progressed Moon reaches your radix Jupiter in the 12th house. This conjunction provides a massive reservoir of spiritual protection, optimism, and resilience, reminding you that your ultimate safety lies in your faith and higher knowledge.

Dissolving the Cocoon (November 2026 to June 2027). The most profound evolutionary work of this entire phase takes place between November 2026 and June 2027. During this extended window, the Progressed Moon triggers a series of squares to your natal Neptune, progressed Neptune, and the Lunar Nodes, while simultaneously forming adjustments (quincunxes) to your natal and progressed Pluto in the 7th house. This is a complete emotional dive into your soul's purpose.

The simultaneous activation of Neptune and Pluto means the Progressed Moon is holding a mirror to your lifelong beliefs about yourself. Your rational mind may feel temporarily confused, and old, structured goals may seem to lose their color. The universe is dissolving your old ego definitions so that you can tune into a higher level of intuition. The quincunxes to Pluto in your relationship house demand that you gently adjust how you hold space for others. Do not force logical outcomes or rush major decisions during the peaks of February and March 2027.

Trust incubation.

Stabilizing the Foundation (July 2027 to October 2028). As you cross into the final stretch of this cycle in July and August 2027, the mist of the Neptune transits begins to clear, revealing a solid, unbreakable internal structure. On July 27, 2027, the Progressed Moon enters a grounding trine to your progressed Saturn in the 4th house. This is the moment where the spiritual insights you gained in the cocoon are locked into your physical reality, bringing the patience, emotional control, and structural focus needed to organize your home, anchor your professional boundaries, and solidify the foundations of the path you are building.

Immediately following this stabilization, on August 9, 2027, the Moon forms a supportive sextile to your Progressed Ascendant. The internal work you have done since 2020 may start showing results as others start to notice and appreciate your unique perspective on things. October 2028, when your Progressed Moon will cross your Natal Ascendant at 28° Pisces, launching you into a more visible and dynamic chapter where you can finally see some progress of your work since 2020.

The Progressed Sun and the Evolution of Your Purpose

While the Progressed Moon reveals the changing rhythm of your emotional life and inner needs, the Progressed Sun describes a much slower and deeper evolution. It reflects the gradual development of your identity, vitality, purpose, and sense of direction throughout your lifetime. As the Sun moves through the progressed chart, it reveals the larger chapters through which you gradually become more conscious of who you are and what you are here to develop.

The Progressed Sun does not usually describe sudden changes. Its movement is slow, and its influence unfolds over many years. For this reason, its major contacts often mark periods when an important part of your life begins to take on a new direction.

Ages 25 to 26

Your Progressed Sun entered Sagittarius and moved into your natal 9th House. This change brought your mind into foreign contacts and affairs, expanded it into higher education and planted the seeds for the future career. As you told me, it was a couple of years after that you moved to a foreign country for good and during that time when you first left your country and the small town you lived in up to then. A very characteristic sign of the Sun shifting into Sagittarius and waking up your Jupiter.

Yet, at the same time, your Progressed Sun remained in the 8th House of your progressed chart. This meant that your search for meaning was not simply intellectual or philosophical. It was deeply connected to transformation, psychological change, intimacy, loss, and the experiences that forced us to confront life beneath its surface. You were seeking the true connection, the intimate bond with someone that could understand, as well as, financial support, an ally, someone to share the burden of your path and help you to grow. The Sun will remain in the 8th House for most of your life. This was a period in which your understanding of yourself and the world were beginning to expand, but that expansion was taking place through deep personal experiences. You were not simply searching for answers. Life was pushing you into growing and opening all the doors for you to enter.

Ages 31 to 36

By 2006, around the ages of 31 and 32, your Progressed Sun entered into a particularly active period. It formed supportive connections to your emotional nature prone to rebirths while beginning to approach the ego dissolving Neptune.

During that time, you experienced a Progressed Full Moon, bringing a period of clarity and culmination. Full Moon periods often reveal something that has been developing beneath the surface and bring it into clearer awareness.

During this time, important questions about security, relationships, beliefs, and your direction in life were becoming increasingly difficult to ignore.

In October 2008, at age 34, your Progressed Sun reached Neptune and the North Node. This was a powerful period of dissolution and redirection. Neptune can dissolve structures that can no longer contain who we are becoming, while the North Node points toward the direction in which life is asking us to grow. Sometimes this process feels inspiring and spiritually meaningful. At other times, it can feel confusing, uncertain, or like the ground beneath our feet is disappearing. Which coincides to the time of your divorce and moving to the town you are still living today and where you build a life for yourself without a family to back you up as you described in our interview when going through the progressions.

In 2009, your Progressed Sun came together with your Progressed North Node, and in 2010 it reached your Natal North Node. The years between 2008 and 2010 therefore represent a prolonged period of redirection. One chapter was ending, but another had not yet completely revealed itself. These years asked you to leave behind something familiar and gradually move toward a life that was more aligned with your continuing evolution. You were fully in Sagittarius time, feeling the post-divorce freedom, meeting new people, starting a new happy life, and making some mistakes, having some heartbreaks and all the good and bad that comes when we are starting a fully new period away from everything, we call home.

Present

Your Progressed Sun has moved into the 10th House and is conjunct to your Natal Midheaven, one of the most significant areas of the chart for understanding direction, vocation, purpose, and the role you are beginning to occupy in the world.

This is the period where you build upon what you learned. The experiences of your life, including the transformations, losses, relationships, searching, and changes of direction that came before, are now asking to be brought into a more visible and purposeful form. Since 2025, Progressed Mercury has been moving together with your Progressed Sun near the Midheaven. This adds an important intellectual dimension to this chapter. Your thoughts, ideas, knowledge, communication, and ability to interpret your experiences are becoming increasingly connected with your sense of purpose.

This can be a particularly important period for learning, writing, teaching, studying, communicating, and making decisions about your future. Ideas that may have existed privately for many years are beginning to seek a place in the outside world.

2026 to 2027

The period covered by this report, from 2026 into 2027, is one of movement and definition. Your Progressed Sun is activating your Midheaven while also challenging your Natal Ascendant. Together, these influences suggest that changes in your public direction are requiring changes in the way you understand yourself. You may no longer be able to remain in an identity that belongs to an earlier chapter of your life.

This is a period in which procrastination becomes increasingly difficult. Decisions that have been forming internally may now require action. You may feel a stronger need to pursue your own goals, define your direction, and create a life that is more closely aligned with your sense of purpose. There can also be tension between your personal ambitions and the expectations of others. As you move forward, it will be important to pursue your goals without unnecessarily damaging relationships that remain meaningful to you. The challenge is not simply to assert yourself. It is to learn how to move forward with purpose while maintaining awareness of the people around you.

One of the most important features of this period is the meeting of your Progressed Sun and Progressed Mercury. This brings your developing identity and purpose into close contact with your mind, ideas, knowledge, and ability to communicate. Late 2026 can therefore become an important period for decisions, planning, studying, writing, teaching, organizing your ideas, or making commitments that require clarity and concentration. This is a time when you may begin to understand more clearly what you want to do with the knowledge and experience you have accumulated throughout your life.

Beginning in September 2026, another supportive influence begins to strengthen your ability to act on your intentions. Motivation, determination, vitality, and the willingness to overcome obstacles become increasingly available. This does not mean that everything will happen effortlessly. The larger theme of this period is that your purpose requires participation. Opportunities may arise, but you will need to make decisions, act, and continue building what you want your future to become.

At the same time, your Progressed Sun forms a supportive connection with your Natal Mercury, reaching its strongest point in May 2027. This further supports communication, learning, writing, teaching, planning, and important decisions. The period between late 2026 and the middle of 2027 can therefore be especially productive for putting your ideas into a more concrete form.

Looking Toward 2028

The years leading toward 2028 continue the process that is now beginning. You are standing at an important threshold between the private experiences that shaped you and the more visible direction that is beginning to emerge. The Progressed Sun's movement toward and through the highest part of your chart suggests that the coming years are asking you to take greater ownership of your direction. You are entering a chapter in which the life you have lived becomes material for the life you are now consciously choosing to build.

Progressed Mercury and the Evolution of Your Mind

Progressed Mercury describes how your mind develops throughout your life. It shows changes in the way you think, communicate, learn, make decisions, and understand your experiences. Because our understanding changes as we mature, Mercury can reveal important periods when we begin thinking differently, questioning what we once believed, or discovering new ways of expressing what we know.

You were born with Mercury retrograde, suggesting that your natural way of processing life began more internally. You may have needed time to think things through for yourself rather than immediately accepting what you were told. There is also a strong questioning and independent quality to your mind. You are likely to look beneath the surface, reconsider ideas, and arrive at conclusions through your own experience.

Ages 4 to 6

Around age 4 or 5, Mercury stopped moving backward and prepared to move forward. By age 5 or 6, this change was complete.

This represents an important developmental shift in the way your mind was beginning to engage with the outside world. At such a young age, you may not remember a particular event associated with it, but you may recognize changes in how you learned, communicated, interacted with others, or became more confident expressing your thoughts.

Ages 11 to 18

Around age 11 or 12, Mercury returned to the exact position it occupied when you were born, but this time it was moving forward. Symbolically, something that had initially been turned inward was now ready to develop more openly. This period may have encouraged greater trust in your own perceptions and ideas.

Only a few months later, another important mental awakening occurred. You may have become increasingly aware that you did not necessarily think like everyone around you. There could have been new interests, sudden realizations, changes in your thinking, or a stronger desire to question established ideas. This can be intellectually stimulating, although at times it can also produce mental restlessness or a feeling that your mind is moving faster than the environment around you.

Around age 13 or 14, your thinking became more intense and determined. You may have become more willing to investigate what was hidden, defend your opinions, ask difficult questions, or speak with greater force. This period could also have brought arguments or mental pressure, particularly when you felt strongly about something.

Around age 15 or 16, relationships, affection, personal values, and questions about what and whom you valued became more connected with your developing understanding of life.

Then, around age 17 or 18, your mind and developing identity came together at an important threshold. This was also around the time your daughter was born. Becoming a mother would naturally have transformed the way you thought about yourself, your responsibilities, your choices, and your future. Whatever you had understood life to be before this point now had to include an entirely new identity and responsibility.

Your Twenties

Around age 26 or 27, your mental development entered another important period involving relationships, intimacy, family, security, and long-term responsibilities.

There was determination here, but also seriousness. Decisions may have carried greater consequences, and you may have found yourself thinking more carefully about what you were building and what could realistically endure. Relationships and family circumstances could have required important conversations, commitments, boundaries, or decisions about the future.

This was less about exploring possibilities and more about understanding what you were prepared to commit yourself to. Interestingly enough you got married during this period.

Ages 34 to 42

Around age 34 or 35, the tone changed considerably. After many years of thinking deeply about relationships, intimacy, trust, and complicated emotional experiences, your mind began searching for a larger understanding of life.

You may have become increasingly interested in philosophy, spirituality, education, different cultures, travel, belief systems, or anything capable of helping you understand the meaning behind your experiences.

Around age 38 or 39, this search intensified. Intuition, imagination, spirituality, emotional understanding, and psychological insight could become much stronger. You may have perceived connections that were difficult to explain rationally or become increasingly receptive to spiritual or symbolic ways of understanding life.

There was also a challenge during this period. Inspiration and intuition could sometimes become difficult to distinguish from hope, assumption, or belief. Part of your development involved learning when to trust what you sensed and when to question it. Your mind was opening considerably, but greater openness also required greater discernment. In your life you were getting divorced and meeting a new group of people and a town that became your people and your home.

Around age 41 or 42, what you were learning began connecting more directly with where your life was going. Certain ideas, studies, conversations, decisions, or changes in perspective may have helped redirect your future. Your mind was no longer simply trying to understand your past. It was becoming an instrument for determining what came next. Here you made a strong financial error and ended up with a large debt for the rest of your working days as you went back to study and decided to study Acupuncture.

The Present

You have now reached one of the most significant periods in Mercury's development. At approximately age 51, your developing mind, identity, and life direction are coming together. This can bring greater clarity about what you know, what you believe, what you want to communicate, and what you want to do with the knowledge you have accumulated throughout your life.

Writing, teaching, studying, counseling, advising, speaking, publishing, or communicating your ideas can become especially important. Professional decisions may also become more significant because you are reconsidering not only what you want to do, but what you want your work and contribution to represent.

There is another beautiful connection with the beginning of your life. You were born with a questioning, independent mind that needed to investigate things deeply and reach its own conclusions. That same part of you is being strongly reactivated now, but after more than fifty years of experience. The difference is important.

Earlier in life, much of this process was internal. You were trying to understand yourself, other people, relationships, difficult experiences, and eventually the larger meaning behind them. Now there is greater potential to do something with what you have learned. Ideas that were once private may need expression. Knowledge accumulated through personal experience may become useful to other people. You may feel increasingly compelled to communicate in your own way rather than repeat what others have taught you. This is therefore not simply a period of having more ideas. It is a period of developing confidence in your own voice.

Looking Ahead: 2026 to 2028

From 2026 through 2028, your ideas, identity, and sense of direction continue to come together. This is a productive period for writing, teaching, studying, communicating, and making important decisions about your professional future. During 2028, there is additional support for independent thinking, new ideas, and finding your own way of communicating what you know.

In October 2028, Mercury enters Capricorn and your natal 10th House, beginning an important new chapter after almost twenty years in Sagittarius. The emphasis gradually shifts from searching for meaning to building something with what you have learned, particularly in your career, public role, and long-term direction. Your thinking becomes more practical, organized, and focused on results. Ideas need structure, and knowledge needs application.

As this new chapter begins, Mercury connects positively with Mars, Venus, and the Sun, supporting action, relationships and values, and greater confidence in your decisions. Late 2028 therefore begins a period of turning knowledge into something tangible and giving greater structure to the professional direction you have been developing.

Progressed Venus and the Evolution of Your Values

Progressed Venus describes how your relationship with love, pleasure, self-worth, money, and personal values develop throughout your life. As Venus progresses, it reveals how our understanding of relationships and happiness matures, and how we gradually discover what is genuinely valuable to us.

You were born with Venus in Scorpio in the 8th House, giving relationships and emotional bonds considerable depth from the beginning. Love is rarely superficial here. Trust, intimacy, loyalty, vulnerability, and the deeper emotional exchanges between people can become important teachers throughout life. There can also be lessons surrounding attachment, loss, shared resources, and learning where your values end and another person's begin.

Your Early Years

During your first years of life, Venus was bundled with four other planets. Although the aspect occurred too early to consciously remember, it became part of the foundation from which your sense of affection, value, belonging, and self-worth developed.

Around age 12 or 13, Venus connected with Saturn, bringing a more serious tone into this development. Family circumstances and the emotional atmosphere of home may have influenced what you learned about love, responsibility, security, and commitment. This period may have caused severance from the father's figure, duty and responsibility with the family, issues with the structure of the home, and some emotional bruising that may have helped the development of emotional boundaries.

Ages 19 to 31

During this time Venus began moving into an area of your life concerned with discovering a larger world. By age 21 or 22, Venus entered Sagittarius, beginning a long new chapter in the evolution of your values and relationships. Sagittarius needs room to grow. Relationships increasingly need to offer more than emotional intensity or security. They needed meaning, honesty, freedom, learning, and the possibility of discovering something beyond what you already knew. Different cultures, places, philosophies, spiritual beliefs, education, and experiences outside your familiar environment could influence what you valued and whom you were drawn toward. It was during this period that you moved to another Country and started a master's program, which are two things that are very much so a part of your soul evolution. If you have ever questioned if you were wrong about making that decision, here you have the confirmation that "fate and will" worked together to get you there.

Around age 27 or 28, love and values became strongly connected with idealism, spirituality, and the search for something greater. This could have opened the heart considerably, bringing compassion, inspiration, romance, and a desire for a deeper kind of connection. It could also have made it easier to idealize people or relationships, see what you hoped was there, or sacrifice too much for an ideal. Part of Venus's development during this period involved learning the difference between unconditional love and losing yourself within what you wanted love to become. At this time of your life, you were getting married and placing all your choices and who you were on the back burner in the name of a relationship.

Around age 30 or 31, Venus reached an important developmental point connected with the direction your life was taking. Relationships, values, beliefs, or experiences involving the wider world could become part of the path carrying you into the next stage of life. You were living in another country, a completely different culture, married to your best friend, still not growing into who you were supposed to become. Still depending on someone else for emotional and financial safety.

Ages 43 to 46

By 2018, Venus reached the highest area of your chart. Something that had developed through relationships, personal experience, and evolving values was beginning to connect more strongly with your direction in the world. This period indicates greater attention to career, reputation, creative contribution, relationships that influence your direction, or the desire to build a life that reflects what you actually value. Communication and original ideas were also connected with this period, suggesting that your particular way of thinking and expressing yourself could become increasingly relevant to what you wanted to contribute.

In 2020, Venus entered Capricorn and your natal 10th House, beginning another major chapter where ambition and wanting to do something of yourself, wanting to improve your reputation, finding relationship with powerful people, and questioning the value of your work and how your employment reflect on your reputation. Reputation starts to become a theme of bigger importance to you because Capricorn changes Venus's priorities. Relationships, financial choices, creative work, and professional goals are measured by whether they can endure and whether they contribute to the life you are trying to build. There may be less willingness to invest yourself in people or situations that have no direction.

Between 2020 and 2023, Venus, Mars, and the Sun were connected harmoniously between your Natal chart and your Progressed chart. This helped bring desire, values, and identity into greater cooperation. Because of the intensity of the planets and houses involved, during this period a romance could start that would change your values, trigger the ambition of Venus in Capricorn, trigger the passion and heat of the sun, and the desire caused by Mars. Connections during this period affected your reputation and career choices.

Present

In 2026, Venus reaches a much more challenging stage. Your desires, relationships, finances, professional direction, and sense of personal value are pressing against a longstanding tension between your own emotional needs and the dynamics that can develop within relationships. This can make 2026 an important period of reassessment. What you want for yourself may no longer fit comfortably with what another person wants from you. Professional ambitions may compete with personal or relational needs. Questions surrounding money, dependence, control, emotional security, or how much you give to others may also become more difficult to avoid. The purpose of this period is not necessarily to end relationships or abandon what you have built. It is to reveal where your values have changed and where an old arrangement may need to change with them.

Because Venus is now moving through your 10th House, this process is also connected with the future you are building. You may become increasingly aware that professional fulfillment cannot be separated from personal values. Success that requires you to betray what matters to you will become harder to tolerate.

Looking Ahead: 2026 to 2028

The Venus story through 2028 is less about finding something new and more about clarifying what deserves your commitment. The tensions activated in 2026 can reveal where relationships, financial choices, emotional patterns, and professional ambitions need greater balance. Rather than immediately resolving everything, the following years allow you to gradually reorganize your priorities around what has lasting value. Venus in Capricorn favors patience. It asks you to choose carefully, invest wisely, develop mature relationships, and build professional or creative work capable of surviving beyond the excitement of the moment. The larger lesson is becoming increasingly clear: fulfillment is no longer simply about what you desire. It is about what you are willing to build, protect, and take responsibility for because it genuinely matters to you.

This is the evolution of Venus from Scorpio to Capricorn. What began as a search for deep emotional connection gradually expanded into a search for meaning, and has now become a question of what you want to create from those experiences.

Progressed Mars and the Evolution of Your Drive

Progressed Mars describes how the way you act, assert yourself, pursue what you want, and respond to challenges develops throughout your life. It reflects courage, ambition, anger, desire, sexuality, physical energy, and the instinct to defend yourself or fight for something important. As Mars progresses, it can show how you gradually learn to use your strength more consciously and where your energy needs to be directed.

You were born with Mars at the very beginning of Scorpio in the 8th House. Mars is exceptionally strong in Scorpio, giving considerable determination, endurance, emotional intensity, and the ability to keep going through difficult circumstances. You may instinctively understand that some situations require strategy rather than immediate action, and when something matters deeply, you are unlikely to approach it halfway. I go deeper into the traits of the planets and signs in your birth chart report.

Your Early Years

Around age 11 or 12, Mars formed a supportive connection with Jupiter. This could have increased confidence, courage, enthusiasm, or the desire to expand beyond existing limitations. There may have been greater willingness to take risks, pursue something strongly, or trust your ability to overcome difficulties. Conflicts with parents for freedom are common during this time and may be represented by this aspect. It is possible that you wanted freedom to explore, to go out into the world, to know more and to travel more, and it is possible that your family brought it to your life. Curiosity may drive deeper studies since some of the strengths have developed internally rather than through obvious external achievements. Faith, imagination, spirituality, or simply an underlying belief that you could survive difficult experiences may have helped strengthen your ability to move forward.

Around age 13, Mars moved into the relationship area of your progressed chart, beginning a very long chapter in which much of your development around action, desire, anger, boundaries, and self-assertion would occur through your interactions with other people. Relationships were places where you learned when to compromise and when to say no. Other people could have challenged you, motivated you, provoked you, or forced you to become clearer about what you wanted. Because Mars remained in Scorpio, these interactions were unlikely to feel superficial. Trust, loyalty, intimacy, power, vulnerability, and emotional honesty could become important parts of learning how to relate without surrendering your own strength.

Your Mid-Twenties

Around age 26, Mars connected positively with Saturn and because Mars cuts, and Saturn is in your 4th House of families and ancestral bonds, your relationship with your family is cut as you are accepted in the program you applied for and stayed far from home until the present days. Mars provides the drive to act while Saturn asks what can realistically be sustained. Together, they can strengthen endurance, but they can also describe periods when life requires considerable effort and there is little room for impulsive choices. Separating from loved ones, starting your Masters' program and meeting your future husband during this time seem to confirm this part of your fate.

Around age 27, your developing mind and your drive came together very strongly, and this influence continued for approximately two years. Thoughts could lead quickly to action, and conversations and decisions could carry considerable force. This time is represented by intense socialization in an educational center where all your new friends (Mercury) are doing tons of activities together (Mars). It was a time of learning, socialization, developing a long-term connection with a Gemini rising, enjoying education, working a lot, and living a lot. Very positive time of life.

Ages 43 to 44

In 2018, Mars left Scorpio and entered Sagittarius after spending approximately forty-four years on the same sign. This represents one of the most important changes in your progressed Mars. For much of your life, Mars in Scorpio approached challenges through intensity, persistence, emotional depth, and strategic control. Sagittarius begins directing that strength outward. There is a growing need for movement, freedom, truth, exploration, and a larger sense of purpose. You may become less willing to remain involved in situations simply because you have invested deeply in them. Increasingly, you need to understand where something is taking you and whether it still reflects what you believe.

Changes in worldview, philosophical approach, religious beliefs can happen during this period, or the search for meaning can become increasingly connected with what you desire for yourself. Because Mars continues to develop through the relationship area of your progressed chart, other people remain important catalysts. Relationships may challenge your beliefs, expose differences in values or direction, or encourage you to explore possibilities you would not have pursued alone. There can also be greater need for freedom within relationships and less tolerance for dynamics that feel controlling or stagnant.

The Present

You are still in the early part of a much longer Mars in Sagittarius chapter. At approximately age 51, you are learning to direct an enormous amount of strength that was developed during the decades Mars spent in Scorpio toward a different purpose. The emphasis is gradually shifting away from survival, self-protection, and maintaining control toward movement, purpose, and acting according to your inner truth. This does not remove the determination of your natal Mars. That remains part of you. What changes is where the strength is directed. Mars in Sagittarius needs a destination, a principle, a purpose, or a possibility worth pursuing.

Looking Ahead: 2026 to 2028

Mars develops relatively quietly through 2026 and 2027, but in 2028 it reaches an important turning point. Your desire to move forward begins activating a longstanding tension between your own emotional needs and the powerful dynamics you can experience through relationships. This may bring situations in which remaining passive becomes increasingly difficult. You may feel a stronger need to defend your independence, make a decision, confront an existing dynamic, or act on something you have been feeling for some time.

Because Mars is moving through your natal 9th House, the issue may also involve what you believe, where you are going, what you are learning, or the larger direction you want your life to take. Self-development lies in pursuing your own meaningful direction rather than simply reacting against another person or circumstance. As Mars continues forward, it approaches Neptune and your North Node. This starts another significant chapter involving ideals, spirituality, purpose, and the direction of your future. Inspiration can become a powerful source of action, but discernment will be essential. There is a need to distinguish between a meaningful calling and something that is being pursued primarily through hope or idealization.

By 2028, Mars is therefore beginning to ask for more than courage. It represents the need to choose a direction worthy of your energy and to act with greater purpose. The strength has always been there. The next stage is learning where that strength is most meaningfully directed.

And this concludes your Progressed Report.

My advice to you is to keep this report for our future sessions, so we no longer need to go back through the past to understand the connections but can instead concentrate on the years ahead as they unfold. Ideally, progressed charts should be looked at once a year to understand where you are in your soul's evolution and how current transits are affecting both the potential of your natal chart, your natal promise, and the person you have evolved into today.

Thank you for trusting me with this work and for hiring my services. Have a blessed existence and a mostly joyful journey.